

angry asian man

4.29.2007

assorted community news

Last week in the San Francisco Bay Area, representatives from more than 50 health care and Asian American organizations launched a new major 2-year-long public health campaign against Hepatitis B. The goal is to test every Asian American for chronic Hepatitis B, for those not protected, to get them vaccinated and those who are chronically infected, to get them appropriate medical management: Bay Area Groups Launch Anti-Hepatitis B Campaign. For more information, go here: San Francisco Hep B Free